I'm just really happy, really glad that it's kind of over as well, all the work and that the kind of like the mountain that seemed to be at the beginning wasn't at the end of the day, I kind of got through it all and just really, really, happy that it's done.

I chose the Masters in Psychology at Derby because, at the time, I was in Australia on a teacher exchange and I needed to do a BPS accredited course and Derby at the time was the only one that did an online BPS accredited version of the Masters in Psychology and, because I wanted to use it in Australia, I knew it had to be BPS and that was like fundamental and it was a great course.

With living over in Australia now, they have school psychologists or school counsellors that you need a degree in psychology to be one and so, after teaching for like 14 years, I'm going to go into that kind of field next, hopefully, and this was a step towards it.
